CLIMATE CHANGE AND BIODIVERSITY ARE INTERTWINED.

Climate change is appropriately in the headlines. An interlocking piece is biodiversity. If we restore the climate but lose biodiversity we've failed. ENDANGERED is a powerful new campaign focused on harnessing the power of fine art to help protect and enable the world's most endangered species.

Taos-based fine artist Kimberly Webber is collaborating with entrepreneur, philanthropist and Conscious Leadership scholar Tom Eddington to focus attention and to generate funds through the sale of Dedicated Editions fine art prints to save our endangered brethren.

Partnering with some of most high-profile and global charities, the campaign features artists Kimberly Webber and others, who have painted many of the majestic endangered species including lions, rhinos, tigers and jaguars. Dedicated Editions include exclusive archival museum prints for a collection that will tour campaign partner galleries around the world.

Webber and Eddington have created a Collector's Box Set of 18 prints featuring endangered species. The Dedicated Editions are available as a Box Set as well as individual prints.

The ENDANGERED campaign partner galleries and NGOs will sell the prints and hold special events, through the support of campaign Sponsors. 70% of the sale price of the Dedicated Editions will go directly to the partner charities committed to protecting and enabling the thriving of endangered species.

ENDANGERED IS A DIRECT CHANNEL TO SAVE LIVES.

We must honor, protect, and have reverence for nature's art and do all that we can to eliminate the threat of extinction and ensure the thriving of all life.

For more than 20 years Webber has painted images of animals and archetypal figures and she has donated a percentage of her proceeds to a wide variety of charities protecting and enabling animals, forests and wild habitats. .

With the Amazon burning and the Endangered Species Act at risk in the United States, Webber and Eddington decided to create a solution to protect and enable biodiversity.

Part one of the solution is their recently opened gallery, Untitled Editions, in Taos, New Mexico that features the limited edition prints. Part two is the creation of the ENDANGERED exhibition that is available to travel to prominent galleries around the world to raise money for endangered species.

The soft launch of the ENDANGERED exhibition and tour begins in early 2020 at the LA Art Show, February 5th - 9th. Additional funds will be raised via the sale of greeting cards, a calendars and other merchandise all of which will feature the fine art images.

Eddington, a business advisor and leadership coach who has handled some of the largest mergers in the world including Hewlett-Packard and Compaq, says "We must honor, protect, and have reverence for nature's art and do all that we can to eliminate the threat of extinction. Our global collective is working together for this cause of profound importance. The blend of business, non profits and art can inspire humanity and result in a breakthrough with a clear message of hope and beauty to help turn the tide for all life."

SURVIVAL IS A MEDITATION.
IF WE FOCUS
TOGETHER, WE CHANGE.

Our mission is to awaken public awareness.
It is a meditation of survival and regeneration.
This begins within ourselves.

As artists we have produced images of these animals that become the currency for their survival.

By bringing awareness to this imminent threat to the animals and humanity, our group consciousness connects and expands.

We are committed to a planet that protects and supports all species while providing beautiful art that honors and provides for them.

Survival is a meditation. If we focus together, we change.
